

"Roth contributions" might be one of those terms that you've heard before but aren't sure what it means. And if your employer-sponsored 401(k) or 403(b) plan allows them, they could help you get more out of your savings when you retire.

How are Roth contributions different from regular contributions?

It has a lot to do with taxes and when you pay them. And remember, the higher your income, the higher your tax rate.

Regular contributions to your 401(k) or 403(b)

- You don't pay income taxes on the money when you contribute.
- You do pay income tax when you withdraw it.
- May be better if you think your tax rate will go down when you retire.

Roth contributions

- You do pay income tax on the money right when you contribute it.
- You don't pay income tax when you withdraw it, as long as you're at least age 59 ½, and the money has been in your account for at least five years.
- May be better if you think your tax rate will be higher when you retire.

Pay taxes now or later?

Figuring out whether you'll pay more taxes now or when you retire can be tricky. However, as long as your employer's plan allows it, you can make a combination of both regular and Roth contributions to help balance out what you owe.

Are Roth contributions right for you?

They may be if you:

- Are a consistent saver.
- Are on track to exceed your estimated retirement needs.
- Can't participate in a Roth IRA.
- Think your income tax rate will be higher in retirement than it is now.

Need help deciding which contributions are right for you?

We can help. Go to principal.com/roth to use the Roth calculator. Then if you're ready, choose which kind of contributions you want to make.

The subject matter in this communication is provided with the understanding that Principal® is not rendering legal, accounting or tax advice. You should consult with appropriate counsel or other advisors on all matters pertaining to legal, tax or accounting obligations and requirements.

Insurance products and plan administrative services are provided by Principal Life Insurance Company, a member of the Principal Financial Group®, Des Moines, IA 50392.